Class : B.A. (1st year) Roll No. : 49 Date : 15/Dec/2020

True or False:

1. An increase in the price of Coke would result in decrease in the demand for Pepsi. False ✓
2. An increase in the price of sugar would result in an increase in the demand for tea. False ✓
3. An increase in the income of a consumer would result in an increase in demand for all types of goods that are demanded by a consumer. True ✗
4. Law of demand states that price and demand are positively related to each other. False ✓
5. Law of demand happens due to application of law of diminishing marginal productivity. True ✗
6. Law of demand explains quantitative relationship between price and quantity demanded. True ✓
7. Change in quantity demanded means an increase and decrease in demand and Change in demand curve means expansion and contraction in demand. False ✓
8. With a fall in income, demand for normal goods will rise. False ✓
9. With the rise in price, quantity demanded for the goods falls and it is known as decrease in demand. True ✗
10. If price of substitute goods falls, demand for related goods will also fall? True ✓
11. If income of the buyer decreases, demand for inferior goods decreases. True ✗
12. If Indian Airlines reduce fares from Delhi to Mumbai, demand curve for air travel shifts rightward. False ✓
13. The quantity of a commodity demanded by a consumer is influenced by the number of consumers in the market. True ✗
14. If an increase in the price of one commodity leads to an increase in demand for a second commodity, then the two commodities are complements. True ✗
15. A change in the price of a commodity will cause the demand curve for that commodity to shift. True ✗
16. Butter and bread are substitutes. False ✓
17. The income elasticity of demand for an inferior good is negative. True ✓
18. The cross-price elasticity of demand for two goods is negative if the goods are substitutes. True ✗
19. A normal good is one for which the income elasticity is greater than one. True ✗
20. Demand for luxury car is highly price elastic. True ✓
21. If price elasticity of demand is zero, then any price change will also have zero effect on total revenue. False ✓
22. If the quantity demanded of the product is sensitive to a change in its price, the demand for the product is said to be price elastic. True ✓
23. The value of elasticity, where the demand curve is a rectangular hyperbola, is always zero. False ✓
24. Commodities having more than one use are less price elastic. False True ✗
25. Petrol and diesel have positive cross elasticity of demand. True ✓

Assignment -II
Session 2020-21

Class: B.Com. I Semester -II

Subject: Economics

Topic of assignment

(a) Explain diagrammatically Demand Pull and Cost Push Inflation 10 marks
 (b) Explain effects of inflation on different sections of society 10 marks

Instructions:

- Write your name and roll no. on the first page of your assignment-I
- Make a single pdf file of both (a), and (b)
- Every page should be given a number i.e. 1, 2, 3.....
- Submit on or before 10 June 2021.

Assignment on - II MACROECONOMICS (2020-21)

Question-1 Explain diagrammatically Demand Pull and Cost Push Inflation.

Answer:- DEMAND-PULL INFLATION:

Demand-pull inflation theory is the oldest theory of price rise. According to this theory, inflation refers to a situation in which aggregate demand at the existing price level far exceeds aggregate supply of goods and services. Such an inflation arises due to excessive demand before full employment when aggregate demand increases there is increase in output also but after full employment increase in aggregate demand does not evoke any increase in aggregate supply.

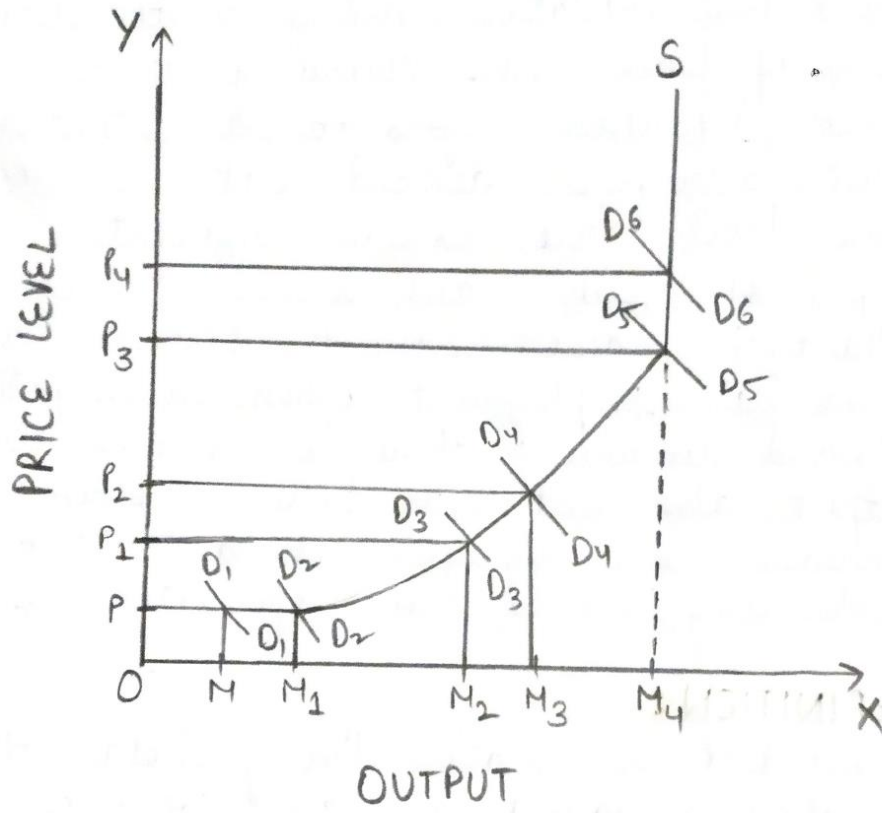

DEFINITION:

"Demand pull inflation theory holds that inflation is caused by an excess of demand (spending) relative to the ~~both~~ available supply of goods and service at existing prices"

PETERSON'

1 EXPLANATION :-

Demand-pull inflation is illustrated with the help of figure.

In figure, Output is shown on X axis and price level on Y axis. PS is the Supply curve and D_1, D_1, D_2, D_2 etc, are demand curves. Initially demand curve is D_1, D_1 and price level is OP. When demand increases, as shown by D_2, D_2 curve, there is no increase in price, rather there is increase in Output from OM to OM_1 . When demand increases further, as shown by demand curves D_3, D_3 and D_4, D_4 then output and prices both increase as OM_2, OM_3 and OP_1, OP_2 respectively. OM_4 Output represents full employment situation. Hence, Increase in demand as shown by demand curve D_5, D_5 and D_6, D_6 leads to increase in prices as shown by OP_3 and OP_4 without there being any corresponding increase in supply.

(2) CAUSES:

There are three main theories relating to demand - full Inflation -

- (i) Quantity Theory of Money -
According to this theory after full employment, increased quantity of money

COST-PUSH INFLATION -

Cost-Push Inflation theory is a new theory of inflation. As a theory it was propounded due to some ~~particular~~ Peculiar situation arising after 1960 in America and other development countries. In such countries, on the one hand prices were rising and on the other production was falling. Hence, the economists concluded that inflation is also possible in a situation where aggregate demand is falling but cost of production is rising.

DEFINITION -

"Cost Push Inflation is the consequence of rise in costs. It is characterised by insufficiency of aggregate demand, unemployed resources and excess capacity."

A.S. Compgana.

EXPLANATION:

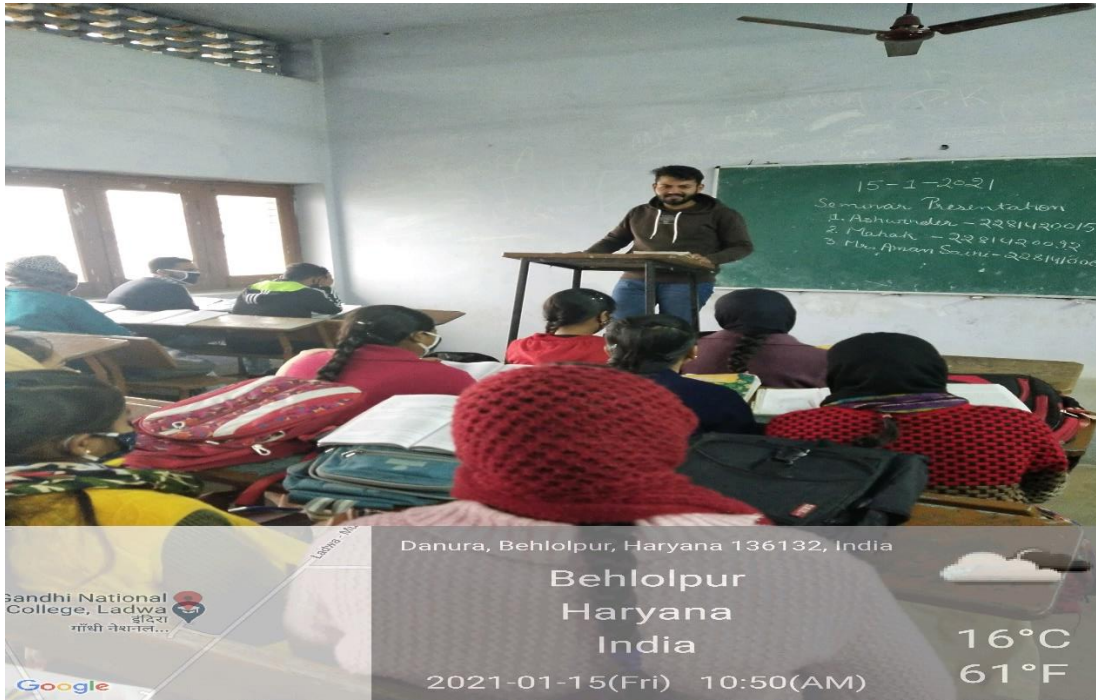

Cost push inflation can be explained with the help of figure. In it output is shown on - X-axis and price level on Y-axis. DD is Demand curve and SS is the Supply curve that becomes parallel to Y-axis after point A.
